

Adaptation of Indonesian Repatriation in Japan with Educational and Socioeconomic Approaches

by Paramita Cahyaningrum Kuswandi, Rizqa Devi Anazifa, Arum Darmawati, Fathurrohman

ABSTRACT

Japan is one of the countries that has a large number of diaspora and most of them are people who will return to Indonesia. These Indonesian citizens who return to Indonesia (repatriation) need assistance, especially in choosing schools for their children and adapting to socioeconomic conditions in Indonesia. Therefore they need knowledge and assistance during the repatriation process. This service aims to provide assistance and socialization about health in order to maintain health from Covid-19, the development of educational conditions and socio-economic activities of the community in Indonesia in preparation for the repatriation of diaspora from Japan to Indonesia. The partner of this International Cooperation PkM activity is KMI Himamastu, Japan. Activities are carried out online with webinar events for socialization, discussion and assistance on health, economics and education materials. Webinars are held three times with one webinar being held once a month. Participants enthusiastically conduct discussions during the webinar. The obstacle faced was the diverse schedule of participants, making it difficult to increase the number of participants in each webinar event. A more intensive approach is needed to increase the number of participants in each activity.

Kata Kunci: repatriation, international cooperation, health, education, economy