DEVELOPING GERMAN INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS FOR CULTURAL TOURISM DESTINATION GUIDING TECHNIQUES: A CORPUS-BASED STUDY

by Wening Sahayu, Sulis Triyono, Pratomo Widodo, Nor Fariza Mohd. Nor

ABSTRACT

This research is an international collaborative study between the German Language Education Study Program of FBS UNY and the Department of English, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM). This research is the result of a long discussion conducted by FBS UNY and the English Department. Several times they made cooperative visits and gave lectures at international seminars. Even FBS UNY already has an MoU with the UKM. However, until now there has been no study program within the FBS UNY that has MoA and IA. Therefore, the results of this international collaboration research are to produce MoA and IA in the form of joint research and joint publications so that the German Language Education Study Program FBS UNY gets considerable benefits from the results of this international collaboration. The theme of tourism was chosen in this study because it is a flagship program in the German Language Education Study Program which aims to equip students to be skilled and competent in working in the tourism sector. This research aims to produce scientific articles that will be published jointly in reputable international journals indexed by Scopus.
