ABSTRACT

The still high poverty rate in the community has an impact on the existence of stunted children, as well as the undeveloped Village Owned Enterprises (Bumdes) whose hopes are to improve the welfare of the community. Therefore, there is a need for systematic efforts to overcome these problems. Community Service Activities (PkM), Real Work Lectures aim to provide insight to the target group, namely catin, pregnant women and mothers with toddlers and village health cadres to have insight related to stunting prevention and control, as well as knowledge and insight in Bumdes management for Bumdes managers.

The place for PkM activities is at the location of real work lectures for UNY students, namely in Gununggajah village, Bayat sub-district, Klaten district, with the method of carrying out activities using the approach developed by Knowles, namely adult education, where before the activity a need assessment, planning, implementation and evaluation is carried out. The activity was carried out in 2 stages, the first stage was the Bumdes management workshop, which was attended by the Bumdes management as many as 14 people located at the Gununggajah village hall and the second stage was counseling on prevention and control of stunting, which was attended by a target group of 40 people.

The results of community service in real work colleges can be stated as follows: judging from the presence of participants, both the target audience from the bumdes manager and the target group for stunting prevention, it is very good because it is in accordance with the invitation given, judging from the process going well, judging from the evaluation of the implementation and PPM program customer satisfaction is in the good category, because it gets a score of 3.3. so it can be concluded that this PkM activity is beneficial for the Gununggajah community because it can increase literacy in the field of Bumdes management and stunting prevention.
