ABSTRACT

A cooperation strategy is done by one organization with another organization in building or improving the state of the organization to achieve certain benefits and goals for both parties. One of the strategies used in improving the quality of learning is to increase the cooperation of various stakeholders. This research uses qualitative research to uncover phenomena about what is experienced by research subjects, using descriptions in the form of words and language in a specific natural context and utilizing various scientific methods. UNY has won the highest scores, with 71 cooperation documents recognized by the ministry. However, other aspects are no less critical, including income generating. Most PTN BLU has yet to dare to utilize or optimize the assets in their respective institutions. PTN BLU cooperation has uniformity and needs to be focused on income generating. In contrast, the PTN BH cooperation pattern focuses more on the quality and achievement of income generating for institutions or institutions.
